Bibliography, etc.: Includes bibliographical references and index.
Lines of Fire is the most comprehensive collection of women's writing from the First World War. Its authors are a remarkable cross-section of writers from the world's nations who were altered by this devastating war. In works by well-known authors like Rebecca West and Edith Wharton, as well as writers from India, Armenia, Hungary, and the Cameroons, we hear women speaking out on such issues as politics, economic justice, and social reform. "From incisive political treatises to gripping medical accounts, diary entries, and love letters, the stories gathered here are a reminder of the bond women felt with one another.
